

Claudia Nuber, PCC and Mentor-Coach

Being passionate about professional coaching, Mentor-Coaching with me equally touches the personal as well as the business side of our work.

Many coaches arrive at coaching via having first been a client and bringing the urge to help and fix things. This is not coaching.

Rarely, they consider the challenges of our dynamic and demanding profession. It takes a strong foundation to become a successful coaching professional.

Most coaches also invest part of their working time in the areas of training, and consulting. It is vital to coaching success to distinguish between these different roles and use these distinctions in their clients' best interest.

Mentor Coaching with me is best used for:

- Advancing your professional and entrepreneurial development by evolving into the best possible coach for your clients by getting an even clearer understanding of the myriads of coaching processes possible.
- Coaching is no one-way street. Every professional coach goes part of the way with his/her client whose issues may resonate with them. Coaches having their "jelly jiggled" face the challenge of profound development. I ease eventual growing pains and to smoothen the resulting shift.

What to expect:

- Working with me is both challenging and fun. It definitely is no humor free zone as I believe in joyful ease – even when the going gets tough.
- Every topic is welcome. Whatever you come up with: My professional and personal expertise is at your command.
- Together we evaluate your coaching. We discuss what you can be proud of, what you may have done differently and what effect this may have had. Also we check on the impact on your credentialing journey.
- We work one on one, either by phone or half days face to face. There are no group sessions offered at present.
- In all my work I observe the Ethical Guidelines of the ICF – International Coach Federation www.coachfederation.org
